ROI TO THE FARMER

LEAD BEYOND YOUR FARM

As a soybean farmer, you already play an integral part in the continued success of U.S. agriculture—today that role is growing. The United Soybean Board is looking for farmer-leaders from all backgrounds to serve on the national board. You can make a mark on how your operation and the industry will move forward in the years to come.

WHAT IS THE UNITED SOYBEAN BOARD?

Established in 1991, the United Soybean Board – which administers your Soy Checkoff investments – is composed of 77 volunteer farmer-leaders from across the country with oversight from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Through partnerships, it focuses on increasing return on investment for U.S. soybean farmers. Whether it's through fielding production research, strengthening on-farm resilience, funding analysis for infrastructure improvements, or finding new and expanding markets for U.S. Soy both here and abroad, the checkoff delivers profitability across all U.S. soybean farms.

HOW THE CHECKOFF BRINGS VALUE

Collective investments across food, feed, fuel, industrial, exports and sustainable production have transformed the soybean industry. It's created entirely new categories for demand and advanced production—delivering measurable results back to the farm. Through farmer-led strategic thinking, the Soy Checkoff delivers value through investments that further resilience, differentiation and reputation.

VISION

Partnering to deliver sustainable soy solutions to every life, every day.

MISSION

Create value for U.S. soybean farmers by investing in research, education and promotion of U.S. Soy.

NOMINATION PROCESS AND TERM LIMITS

Soybean farmer-leaders are nominated by their state- or regional-level checkoff organizations, called Qualified State Soybean Boards. The U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Secretary of Agriculture will select individuals from the nominations submitted. Each year, the Secretary of Agriculture appoints approximately one-third of all board members for three-year terms. Each appointed director will then have the opportunity to serve up to three consecutive terms on the board. One term is three years.

GENERAL RESPONSIBILITIES

Volunteer board members act in the best interest of U.S. soybean farmers – not just the state or region they represent. They attend and prepare for all board meetings, committee and work group meetings and industry events. They make important investment decisions, represent the board locally, nationally and internationally, and ensure financial responsibility.

HOW EXPENSES AND REIMBURSEMENTS WORK

Volunteer board members are reimbursed for travel and other expenses related to attending meetings and events on behalf of the United Soybean Board.

TRAVEL EXPECTATIONS AND BOARD MEMBER COMMITMENTS

As a board member, you would be expected to attend at least three in-person meetings a year (February, July and December), participate in work group discussions and represent your industry to others. Volunteer board members may also be asked to travel on behalf of the United Soybean Board to meet customers of U.S. Soy, present to farmers at industry meetings, or engage in media interviews, among other activities. Serving on the United Soybean Board is a commitment of time and talent to the entire soy industry, representing the nearly half-million U.S. soybean farmers.

“Serving on this board means shaping our checkoff investments and determining what the U.S. Soy industry looks like for the next generation. Whether it's the relationships that grow export markets, the research that improves on-farm resilience, or the promotion that elevates our U.S. soybeans from competitors, our farmer-leaders drive all of this work. Real decisions, made by real farmers, delivering real value to soybean farms across this country.”

BOARD PARTICIPATION

All soybean farmers in the country have the opportunity to be nominated for consideration by their Qualified State Soybean Boards and U.S. Secretary of Agriculture for service on the United Soybean Board. We welcome all farmers to participate on our state and national soybean boards. We're at our best when we embrace and encourage different backgrounds and perspectives. For more information on nominations and membership of research and promotion boards, visit the USDA-Agricultural Marketing Service website.

“Farmers are natural leaders, and we make tough calls every single day. Representing the Soy Checkoff gave me a way to take that leadership beyond my field and into rooms where the future of our industry is being decided. It's opened doors I never expected, connected me with growers from different parts of the country, and granted opportunities to make decisions that translate into tangible benefits back home. That's the weight of this work and why it matters to have farmers like you involved.”
